

The next 30 years

Where do we go from here, and how fast can we get there?

We need a regional approach, innovative new ideas, and results-driven leaders to continue to push the envelope for the next three decades. If we could collectively create a grand vision of a livable, sustainable region, what would 2048 look like?

The need for access to affordable housing is at unprecedented levels.

The exponential growth of King County, combined with multiple other conditions, has created the need for 156,000 affordable homes across our region. Projecting growth to 2040, that number of homes jumps to an estimated 244,000.

Such magnitude begs for new breakthroughs and a willingness to move beyond the thinking that tries to merely do “more of the same.” This reality drives us to inspire and lead the way:

- We must use our expertise to build the future based on the seeds we plant today.
- We will navigate the future by continuing to build bridges of breakthrough with the private, public and nonprofit sectors, growing the depth and effectiveness of the HDC network, weaving together new pockets of possibility.
- We will push for a regional approach that sets forth strategic investments for our public dollars.
- We will lift up leaders who embrace results-driven approaches and new ways of thinking.
- We will support the leadership development and technical training needs of our members.
- And we will continue to ask the collective to invest in the most critical work of overcoming the inequities of our region.

Thank you for your support. Together we can build the future.
